

TRINITY NEWS

Fifty days after Easter (Pentecost) and the disciples anxiously wait for the promise Jesus said before the Ascension. The Holy Spirit, the Helper. What might this look like? Maybe the way the Holy Spirit's spectacular entrance of wild wind, flames and strange languages gives a clue that the Kingdom of God can be slightly on the wild side. One of the Celtic symbols for the Holy Spirit is a wild goose. I can recall a childhood memory of being chased by my Uncle's backyard goose, pecking at my heels as I ran as fast as my feet could carry me. Maybe that's not such a bad thing, at least there was some action. God's Holy Spirit calls and inspires action, to be sent out and tell the story of Christ. Oh, and the language we use to speak of this Good News is varied and diverse from a spoken word, a picture or symbol, silence, listening, baking a cake - God is not limited in language - even a wild goose can carry the good news of the risen Christ.
