

TRINITY NEWS

I can remember when I was a young boy being chased unexpectedly by a goose, it bowed its head, made a hissing sound and charged at me. I took the opportunity to run as fast as I could. The Celtic symbol of the Holy Spirit is not a sweet dove as we may be more familiar with, rather a wild goose. It makes sense. They are reminders that the Spirit of God cannot be tamed or contained, when it comes to God, to expect the unexpected. The wild goose communal in nature, its life is identified with the flock. God's Spirit is not a spirit of individualism, but of community. Well I guess that goose kept me alert and on my feet, so to does God, as we sent out with God's Spirit, maybe just omit the hissing bit?

Blessings on this Wild Goose Day of Pentecost.
Fr. Peter
